

Intentional Camera Movement Creative Challenge

Digital Photography Group – creative challenge

“ICM”- 2 Photos

For our June meeting, I’m setting you another creative challenge !

This challenge is all about using Intentional Camera Movement (ICM) to create an abstract image. I’m suggesting this as it could be a potential image for the Wildcard exhibition category.

ICM is a difficult technique, where you deliberately move the camera when pressing the shutter. ICM is not “Panning”, which is where you move your camera in the same direction as a moving subject.

You might need to take lots of photos before you get one you like, so please don’t despair !!

You will need to use a slower shutter speed. A slower shutter will let in more light, so think about shooting in low-light conditions, such as indoors, or evening shots. You can also reduce the light using a ND filter, if you have one.
